THE BOSTON POST is published every morning, at No. 21, Water Street, Boston, by CHARLES G. GREENE, at four dollars per annum, payable in advance; four dollars and fifty cents, if paid within six months, or five dollars at the end of the year. These conditions will be rigidly adhered to.

STENOGRAPHIC GLIMPSES OF CONGRESS.

No. XLIV.

Washington, Jan. 21, 1834.—I was highly gratified this morning to meet with an old friend—a real New Englander. And who, think you, it was?—a brisk, lively, snow storm! a regular North Easter. It has braced up my system more effectually than two Russian belts, and a pair of patent cantelos into the bargain. But yesterday, one could sit with the windows open. The storm commenced last evening when I was at the capitol; and while an audience, larger, I am told, than ever crowded the Representatives Hall before, were perspiring under the Colonization speeches about Africa, we no sooner quit the capitol, than we thought of the frosty Caucasus. It was all over this morning; except the wind had not whistled out the tune to which the genius of the storm marched; he had come to a halt however, and pitched his tent far and wide, in four inches of snow. Now is the time for fox hunting; and Reynard must look for Nathaniel Macon, the greatest brush in the country. There is a club of young gentlemen in this city, some belonging to the Departments, others attached to the foreign legations, who form a sort of club, and are notable fox hunters. I intend trying my neck at the sport before I return:—"all in due time," as Mephistophilis says:—"I may try it in some other sport, if we have much more such hanging weather as we have had."

And now a word about Mr Webster's "opinions" of yesterday—first premising that I shall not for the future undertake to give sketches of arguments, for it is quite impossible to do justice to the speeches of friend or foe in the narrow limits of a single sheet—it is worse than tossing them in a blanket.

Much speculation was on foot touching this gentleman's course. It was thought by some, as he had diverged from the course of his party, he might support the administration; but others, knowing he was committed to the Bank by former speeches, to say nothing of former favors, flattered themselves he would go for the "restoration." "Truth," you will perceive, "lay between;" so he perceived; and he saw safety lay there too—medio tutissimus ibis. So he danced a pas seul to the surprise of all—"down in the middle, up, and cast off," both parties! Sir Christopher Hatton could not have danced it better.

To return to his opinion—for he said he did not debate—should not argue—but merely give his opinion. It was his opinion then, the state of things did not necessarily involve any question of re-chartering; the question was one of expediency; it must be settled soon; or it would agitate the country—nobody would acquiesce in the present state of things—the country would not submit—it was placing greater power (I mean money, said he,) in single hands than had been done in modern times. [Oho! then money is power! though the Bank had no great power with her loans of $70,000,000, but $8,000,000 under the control of government is a vast power, quite sufficient to control the 70,000,000 in the hands of Mr Biddle, under his March Resolution!—This is not every body's opinion. Well, we will "hear him."]

He said there had been three views of the subject presented—

First, the one from the gentleman from Virginia, (Mr Rives) for an abolition of the paper system. A metallic currency was not suited to the state of the times—too antique—too Spartan; it would bring us back to "iron." He laid this aside.

Second, the rechartering; but the bill of '32 had been vetoed; and they could not expect to pass another. So he laid this aside. [But they can pass any bill in spite of a veto, if they can convert two thirds of both Houses into as flaming patriots as they are themselves. But it might require something more than the power ("I mean money") of the March Resolution to do it.]

Third, a new Bank. This he thought feasible; [and, I suppose plausible] and he approved of Mr White's project, laid before the Legislature of Massachusetts.

The opinions of the community concurred in the necessity of a Bank, he said; he was unequivocally of the opinion—there was no alternative but a Bank; it was the duty of Congress to regulate this; the coin was banished from circulation; there ought to be a uniform circulation, to measure every man's property and labor; it was the first of political duties—every man's interest; it was important that Congress should have the direction of the currency, and not leave it to be regulated by 24 States.

He said there was no essential difference between re-chartering the Bank, and creating a new one; they had no power to create any Bank before 1836; yet he put out of the question all right of renewal; thought the Bank might be re-chartered with modifications: the bill should be liberal, and give security against abuse; he did not know whether the Bank desired, or meant to apply for a re-charter; he had no understanding, no concert on the subject.

Thus you have a minified view of Mr Webster's opinions on distress, depression, agitation, &c.; but nothing about deposits or their removal, in terms. His rivals expected he would either go for them, or against them; that he was in a dilemma, and must hang upon one horn of it, either the Bank or the Administration; but he thought it best to "compromise," (a la Clay!) by standing between the horns. It is understood he will make a speech when he makes his report as Chairman of the Committee of Finance.

Mr Ewing, to-day, continued his bombardment, at long shots, which guaranteed the safety of the administration, and the safety of an audience too—for there was a precious small one. As for the Senate, I have never seen them so listless to any speaker during the session. Dr Doppel had certainly plenty of ammunition; he had raked English history, dragged the deep of metaphysics; excavated the Pompeii and Herculaneum of buried and obsolete authorities; but they did not reach the mark—they all fell 50 furlongs short of the subject.

Mr Webster moved to lay the subject on the table at 2 o'clock, that the Senate might go into private Executive business—to act, I suppose, upon the nomination of the Government Directors, in consequence of the obscure hint from the Globe yesterday.

We shall learn to-morrow what has been done. It is rumored that Mr Rives will come into the Treasury; Mr Taney go to England. I only give these as the rumors of the day—quite likely they may be without foundation.

Mr Jones has occupied the floor for two days in the House on the Deposit question. He is a Nullifier, but a stern foe to the Bank. The Biddle men sit very uneasy under the destructive broadsides of the administration party. The Bank, and all connected with it, will rue the day, they made such an outcry about the removal of the Deposits; and the whole country will be more and more satisfied with the firm and unyielding course of Gen. Jackson.

REIS EFFENDI.

No. XLV.

Washington, Jan. 22, 1834.—As I conjectured yesterday, the Senate went into secret session for the purpose of considering the nominations of the Government Bank Directors; and, as you might well expect from a secret session, much passed there, I understand, which would neither be considered "becoming" nor decent elsewhere—personal allusions—not to say abuse; crimination and recrimination; insinuations, innuendoes, suggestions, hits, cuts, et cetera; all which, a "decent respect for the opinions of the world" would have very properly restrained the dignified Senators from uttering, had their session, been public instead of secret. The authority on this point, I believe, is derived from the 5th Section of the 1st Article of the Constitution; and it will be recollected many able and patriotic members of Congress, as well as of the State Legislatures, were decidedly opposed to its adoption. It appears to me, that if any secrecy be necessary in our government, it ought neither to exist in the Legislative any more than the Judicial department; and should at least be confined to the Cabinet of the President; and the present venerable Chief Magistrate it is well known, has no secrets, and openly avows it.

The nominations were acted upon, but not definitely. The old Directors that were re-nominated—and it has been customary, or else by a late rule, it is considered proper, to re-nominate part of the old Directors, and add new ones. No objections, or at least, no insurmountable ones were offered against the new; but the old Directors were, of course, obnoxious to the soi disant Bank patriots. The hint in the Globe of Monday, stirred up this hornet's nest of patriotism; and the friends of the Administration might have expected to be stung a little by them; but they are not afraid of horns, and don't heed their secret, or their public stings.

Perhaps in the course of the week the nomination subject may have another sitting; but it is pretty certain, that it will not be so. Some other object that claims precedence of it; and this consequently is to depend for its decision, upon something else, that those who are not in the secret, can see no relation to.—Thus are affairs managed in secret session.

You may be curious to know how I should get a clue to the Senatorial labyrinths. It was a common topic at the dinner table; we do not know indeed what was said, but what was done. This little incident will probably postpone the final decision of the deposit question for another week; so easy is it to jostle the opposition out of their course, or to retard their progress. I gave you an obscure hint yesterday, that the Boston Resolutions, and Mr White's Bank project might with great propriety meet the approbation of Mr Webster, from the presumption that they had his concurrence, before they passed the ordeal elsewhere. The same suggestion was made to me to-day, by a gentleman who has reason to believe it; so I was not alone in my opinion, however the fact may be. But all this "flattering unction," touching a re-charter with "modifications," or a new Bank without any—which the opposition "lay to their souls," is all moonshine, unless they can bring over to their punic faith the constitutional "two thirds." "Crush the monster," (the Bank) is the old Hero's invariable and constant watch word; and he will consent to charter no monster in its stead.

The conduct of the Bank has undergone such a close scrutiny, and gone through such a scorching purgatory of denunciation, that I doubt whether her retainers will dare ask for a re-charter; they do not hope for success on this point, unless they can succeed in the "restoration"—and restoration will come, if it comes at all, after the Millennium—and at that time, those who are debating the question now, will have to listen to quite a different one, and more deeply interesting to themselves; but, in the language of that respectable authority, I have a foretime quoted, "all in due time." I need not anticipate their fears.

I passed a few moments in the Senate this morning; but as I saw no indications of any thing interesting, I glided to the Supreme Court. Here Mr R. H. Wilde, of Georgia, was arguing an interesting cause, intimately connected with the great subject now before Congress, viz. the constitutionality of a State emitting Bills of Credit; which, in the course of his argument he demonstrated, both from the history and statutes of the colonies and States, to be any circulating paper medium, whether notes or bills issued by a State, whether from a Bank or their Treasury, in which the State had a direct interest, or for which it had provided a sinking or redemption fund. I wish his argument and authorities could come immediately before the public; they would throw a flood of historical and legislative light upon it, that would enable all to see the precarious and deceptive value of all paper currency, set afloat on the authority of a State, and on their faith and credit; and how much superior the stability of private Banks were, established on the reputation and wealth of individuals; and how necessary, moreover, it is, that coin should not be banished from the country, and if it be, that it is the first duty of Congress to adopt some measures to recall it from banishment.

I was not in yesterday at the opening of the cause, but I learnt from the argument the action was brought either by the State or Bank of Kentucky—a State Bank, i. e. one owned by the State,—to recover the value of a certain amount of its bills loaned to an individual or individuals. I spent three hours listening to the argument and authorities of Mr Wilde, and left him at 3 o'clock in the midst of his labors.

In the House they had an obstinate debate about the Appropriation Bill, the House refusing to agree to the striking out of some clause by the Senate. Mr Polk, I understood, principally occupied the floor.

The weather here continues comfortably cold; and we have sleighing here as well as you at Boston.

For your consolation, if you complain of the irregularity and delays of the mail, we can sympathize with you here. It is all owing, no doubt, to the "removal of the Deposits!" A Jackson man should therefore bear it like a Spartan. The "removal" has undoubtedly played the Nick with the roads and weather. But I am not for a "restoration" yet nevertheless and notwithstanding.

REIS EFFENDI.

Two letters from Washington will be found upon the first page of this paper.

Imprisonment for Debt.—The Representatives of the people of this Commonwealth have now fairly submitted to their consideration, the subject of imprisonment for debt. It is before them in a tangible shape; and the responsibility of attempting the repeal of an ancient law, although odious in its features and oppressive in its effects, cannot now attach to any one member of the Legislative body. A repeal or modification of the statute in question, comes before the Legislature with a strong and manly recommendation from the Executive. Hackneyed as this subject has been, in our halls of legislation, at meetings of our citizens, and in our public journals, his Excellency has presented it, if not in a new, yet certainly in a shape clear and unquestionable. His sentiments are the emanations of a benevolent heart, and the convictions of a sound judgment. It is devoutly to be hoped, that he will find in the co-ordinate and popular branch of the Legislature, both hearts and heads to respond to them. As a sound, just, and practical lawyer, he has seen the fatal operation of this abomination of our statute book on all classes of the community. Sentiments like these are not the visionary speculations of the theorist. They are based upon the immutable and eternal principles of justice and the most latitudinarian philanthropy. We congratulate the friends of humanity that the subject is thus brought before the proper remedial tribunal at a period so propitious—at a time when the cry of pecuniary embarrassment echoes in our streets—when the reputed wealthy man is made to feel the pressure, and perhaps for the first time in his life dreams of the horrors of confinement within the precincts of a jail.

That the right to confine the person of a debtor may (says the Executive) well be questioned, that the law is odious and oppressive, few will deny. That it is inconsistent with and revolting to our ideas of national liberty, such as freemen, we would enjoy and perpetuate, all must admit. We vauntingly compare our institutions with those of other nations. Aye, as Christians, we scoff at the code of the "turbaned Turk;" but as Christians and as men we should blush that we do not find there a statute similar to that which disgraces our own. In vain we hold up our system of laws as the refined and concentrated wisdom of ages; as the admiration of the world. In vain we boast of our civil constitutions of government as full of the jealous spirit of liberty, and as guaranteeing to the citizen freedom of person, except in cases of crime. With our peculiar national complacency we turn our eyes upon the decayed and decaying systems of the old world, their despotism and monarchical forms of government, their institutions fraught with abuse and oppression. But let us not in the exultation and harmless indulgence of national vanity, deceive ourselves. Can that be called a perfect state of freedom where one individual, guiltless of crime, is in the power of another? Where one man, whether from passion, malignity, or caprice, can incarcerate and hold in bondage his fellow man as a felon or malefactor, without the intervention of judge or jury? Where an importunate and hard-hearted creditor, reckless of the unavoidable misfortunes of him to whom he has improperly, and in many cases with some degree of criminality given credit, without previously substantiating the validity of his demand, has the power to constitute himself a judge in his own case, and tear an honest but unfortunate man from his fireside and home, and cause him to languish within the walls of a prison.

"To pine in want and dungeon glooms,
Shut from the common air and common use
Of his own limbs."

If it be the end and purpose of civil government and civil regulation to protect the citizen from the capricious and wanton exercise of individual power, that end and purpose will not be attained so long as the liberty of the citizen is restrained or jeopardized by the passions of another, or so long as an immediate appeal to the justice of his country is denied him. This question, so important in its civil and social relation, is at the disposal of the highest power known to the constitution.—That a repeal, or even a modification of the law, will find opponents we do not doubt.—The barriers of inveterate prejudice and temptation to sordid gain, are to be dispelled and removed. To those who are the "fomenters and agitators of the petty war of village vexation," we would say, feed and fatten on human misery and glut your ravenous appetite with the pittance which you wring from the hard hands of peasants—your harvest is almost over. But we do hope, and believe that there are in the Legislature of this ancient Commonwealth, lawyers who have climbed up the vantage ground of their profession, untrammelled or influenced by the laws of gain, unprofessional men, humane and independent enough, responding the sentiments of the Executive, to expunge this obnoxious law from our statute book, and in their wisdom to substitute some provision which will alike protect the creditor from fraud and the honest debtor from a violation of his personal liberty. It may be hoped, says the literary colossus and stern moralist of his age, that our law-givers will at length take away from us this power of starving and depraving one another; but if there be any reason why this inveterate evil should not be removed in our age, which true policy has enlightened beyond any former time, let those whose writings form the opinions and the practices of cotemporaries, endeavor to transfer the reproach of such imprisonment from the debtor to the creditor, till universal infamy shall pursue the wretch whose wantonness of power, or revenge of disappointment, condemns another to torture and ruin, till he shall be hunted through the world as an enemy to man, and find in riches no shelter from contempt.

Removal of Deposits Extra.—A man named James Dodds, of New Jersey, was recently on his way to New York with a load of notions, when he was fleeced by a well dressed young man, whom he invited to ride with him, out of his entire cargo. Out of gratitude, the stranger plied Dodds with liquor at every tavern; and when they had arrived at Hoboken Ferry he not only paid the whole fare across, but persuaded Dodds to take another glass of spirit, and then seat himself by the stove in the cabin, where he immediately fell asleep.—The moment the boat touched the wharf, the stranger mounted Dodds' wagon, drove to Washington Market and disposed of its contents to good advantage.

Dodds was taken, drunk, to a boarding house in Washington street, which he left in the evening to go to a relation's, in Lauren's street. Being unable to find his way, a person whom he met volunteered to show him, and took him through several lone streets to a strange house, where he was persuaded to go to bed. In the course of an hour or two, he was turned out into the street, without shoes, hat, or coat, in which predicament he was met by a watchman, who took him to the watch house, where he lodged the remainder of the night.

He was subsequently released, and returned home to New Jersey—since which time his horses have been found in a lively stable where they were left by the thief, with orders to have them fed with oats three times a day until called for.

The Classical Library, Nos. VIII, IX, and X. embracing Cicero's Orations, Offices, and Cato and Lælius, as translated by Duncan, Cockman, and Melmouth, have been published by the Messrs Harpers. The great and undisputed merit of these translations is so universally known, that any commendation from us would be superfluous; we shall only remark therefore, upon the mechanical execution of the volumes before us, which is very neat and beautiful.

Anecdote.—During the late war, after the capture of one of our sloops of war by a British frigate, the officers of the latter proposed to both ships' companies a trial of physical strength, by lifting a heavy weight of shot.—The proposition was cheerfully acceded to—many a brawny arm was straightened in the experiment. All had tried the utmost tension of muscle, when an American midshipman took his turn, and bore off the palm, by out-lifting the whole of them. "By St Patrick," exclaimed an Irish sailor, belonging to the British ship, "if a Yankee midshipman can lift so much, what will the commodore do?"

Value of Merchandise imported into Boston, from foreign places, from October 1, 1832, to September 30, 1833, $19,095,788.

The amount of revenue raised on the above value of merchandise imported, was $1,092,508 30.

The value of merchandise exported from this port, from October 1, 1832, to September 30, 1833, $7,496,183.

Shockingly Important.—Mr Bennett—the gentleman who publishes confidential letters—has issued proposals for establishing a new paper in Philadelphia, in the prospectus of which he promises to follow up his disclosures "till public liberty shall be established or destroyed." Does Sawney remember the fly's exclamation, "what a dust we raise!"

A resolution has been offered in the Legislature of Maine, authorizing the executive of that State to memorialize the President on the propriety of establishing branches of the West Point Military Academy, in all of the States of the Union.

The offices of the Working-men's Advocate and Republican Journal, at Belfast, Maine, were considerably injured by fire on the 22d instant.

A woman was run over by a sleigh at the corner of Franklin and Washington streets, yesterday. Her head was badly, but not dangerously cut.

For the Boston Morning Post.

Mr Editor.—Your correspondent who "advises Mr Burnham to drop his assumed youth, and appear in his true character, as an adult," &c. is decidedly in error. In my humble opinion, a person has no claims to Mr until he has attained the age of 21 years. Now, sir, I can assure you Master Burnham is not nineteen years old—and claiming the honor to be his friend, I have taken this opportunity to correct the mistake. S. E. C.

Serious Disturbance and Loss of Life.—The Hagerstown, (Md.) papers of Monday, contain the following appalling intelligence:—

"Our military companies have just been ordered out to suppress an insurrection on the line of the Canal, a few miles below Williamsport. An express was sent over by Mr Purcell, Chief Engineer, and a large number of our citizens have repaired to the field of action. The contest is between two parties of the canallers, and it is said that the aggressors were well armed, and about two hundred in number. Serious fears were entertained that they would destroy the works. The cause of the outrage is supposed to be some dissatisfaction about their pay. Several persons, (Irish) had been killed when the express came in."

Richmond, Va. Jan. 21.—The Legislature have at last acted on the deposit question. Mr Marshall's resolutions, rebuking the removal of the deposits, have passed the House, by a vote of 92 to 32.

Mr McCulloch offered a resolution, that it was not the wish of the House that the deposits should be returned; it was rejected by a vote of 75 to 52.

Fire.—The dwelling house occupied by Charles B. Waterman, in Cranston, R. I. was burned in the absence of the family, on Thursday last, with all its contents.

It is more than probable that the vindictive course pursued by some well meaning but too violent friends of the temperance cause, may provoke a retaliation unchristian in its character and unhappy in its effects.

POLICE COURT.

James H. Porter was charged with stealing sundry articles of dry goods and clothing, to the value of $121 from the store of W. H. Milton. Porter had been in Mr Milton's employment, but told him on Saturday that he should quit it, and "try to do better." To this Mr M. made no objection, but gave him a suit of clothes. After matters were all settled, however, Mr M. missed some goods, and called upon Porter at Wilde's on Sunday night, where he found him in bed. Upon searching his trunk, the missing goods were found.—Porter had paid his stage fare to Norwich, and was to have started yesterday morning at 4 o'clock. He made a most singular defence: "I acknowledge that I took the articles, but I consider I've partly paid for them, by picking up small pieces of cloth and selling them to the hatters, and putting the money in the drawer without making any account of it."—Ordered to recognize in the sum of $250, and committed for want of bail.

James Smith was charged with stealing a silver watch, valued at $12, from William Woolnar. After Smith had taken the watch, and sold it for $5, he began to suspect he had made a bad speculation, and thought he could mitigate the wrath of the law, by complaining against himself, and he besieged the Police Court for that purpose on Saturday, till he was laughed out of his project by the officers and bystanders; and on Saturday evening he called upon Woolnar, to make a full confession of his sins; but Veteran Reid, who had been set on the scent by Mr W., unfortunately dropped in and nipped his penitence in the bud by marching him off to jail.—Committed for trial at the Municipal Court.

James Burke, when passing through Atkinson street, about 8 o'clock on Sunday evening, undertook to Burke a lady into the middle of the street. She called to a watchman near at hand, who took him into custody; but while on the way to the watch-house, a friend stepped up, and passed Burke a watch-word in some outlandish lingo, upon which he suddenly wheeled round and planted his bunch of "pickers and stealers" into the watchman's nasal attributes. A flourish of the rattle brought a reinforcement of the watch, and Burke rode out the remainder of his rum-gale in the lock-up.—Committed for trial at the Municipal Court.

Robert Gardner was hailed by a watchman, on Saturday night, for making a great noise. Bob said he'd make as much noise as seemed good unto him, and clinched the watchman's hook, for which he received a few gentle raps on the knuckles. This did not have the effect of soothing his irritation, which was only overcome by a sweat in the lock-up. On Sunday night, out of revenge, he entered the watchman's dwelling-house, and carried off a mat and door key. For the first offence, he was fined $3, and costs, and for the second, bound over for trial at the Municipal Court.

Catherine Boyle pleaded not guilty to a charge of night-walking and rum-drinking. The watch stated that she had been in the watch-house 3 times during the last month; but Catharine was sure they were mistaken, as she had not been in the city for a year. The magistrate, however, refreshed her recollection a little by a reference to the Records, but she was ready to explain how she was sent to the house of correction for seven days, because she could not pay her rent. This defence was also swept away by reading the entry; and as a dernier resort, she attempted the pathetic and imploring—"Mr Judge, please your Lordship, I have not tasted any spirit for 12 months; but last Saturday I had some friends going to leave the country forever, and we took a little wine and beer. I was when they took hold of me. I have walked the streets late and early, for the last seven years, without being abused by the watchmen before." The Court protected her from any further abuse of the kind for a couple of months, by sentencing her to the house of correction.

The trial of Rev. Abner Kneeland, for blasphemy, which commenced in the Municipal Court on Tuesday, terminated yesterday morning. The jury was out about two hours, and returned a verdict of Guilty.

This morning at 10 o'clock Mr Kneeland was called up to receive the sentence of the Municipal Court, which was rendered against him as follows: That he suffer three months imprisonment in the common jail, and be required to recognize with two sureties in the sum of $500, for his good behavior for five years.

Mr Kneeland addressed the Court as follows:—"May it please your Honor—I thank the honorable Court for the indulgence which has been extended towards me through this long and interesting cause—and for the clemency of the sentence which the Court in the exercise of its discretion under the law has awarded; but I feel it a duty to myself, to my particular friends, to the free citizens of this Commonwealth, and to the people of this great National Republic, to claim an appeal to a higher tribunal, and am ready to enter into recognizance with sufficient sureties to prosecute the appeal."

He then gave bonds in the penal sum of $400, with two sureties, Daniel Draper and Thos. J. Vinton, to prosecute his appeal.—Sat. Eve. Gaz.

The case of Mondruca vs. Barker, which has excited a good deal of interest, was decided in the Supreme Court on Saturday, in favor of the defendant, on an appeal from the Common Pleas, where a verdict was rendered for the plaintiff. The plaintiff claimed damage from the defendant (master of a steam-boat) for refusing to admit Mondruca's wife into the ladies' cabin, she being a colored person.—Transcript.

A Second Caleb Quotem.—The Middletown (Connecticut) Sentinel of Wednesday says:—"One day last week a small bundle was received by a gentleman in Meriden, on which was the following singular superscription—'whicm by the consent of the receiver, is copied verbatim et literatim.'"

Capt William Lawrence, Esq. dealer in tin Ware—Clock and Watch maker—Manufacturer of Shovels—Gold Rings—Pills—Spades and Coffee Mills and Bellows—Takes care of the towns post—belongs to the Church and Temperance Society, and rides in the troop.

Scrope on Titles.—"What's in a name?"—Poulett Scrope, the political economist, the other day was asked why he did not, in the title-page of his new work, state that "the principles" were deduced from the Social Laws of Natural Welfare, instead of the Natural Laws of Social Welfare? "Pon my soul," said Scrope, "it never struck me; but one title is quite as intelligible as the other."

Velvet vs. Broadcloth.—An extraordinary revolution in male costume is announced for the approaching Parisian season. Nearly 40 young men of the highest fashion have agreed to introduce velvet coats, velvet shoes, and even velvet hats, for full evening dress; a style, in short, in some degree approaching the costume of Louis XIII.

CONGRESS.

In the Senate, Thursday, Jan. 23, on motion of Mr Webster, the Senate resumed the consideration of the report of the Secretary of the Treasury, together with the resolutions submitted by Mr Clay, in relation to the removal of the public deposits from the Bank of the United States; when

Mr Preston rose, and addressed the Senate in opposition to the removal of the deposits, until 3 o'clock, when, without coming to a conclusion, he gave way to a motion to adjourn.

On motion of Mr Kent, the Senate adjourned.

In the House of Representatives, Mr Chilton's resolution respecting the extension of the pension laws, coming up again as the unfinished business for the morning,

Mr Lane, of Indiana, addressed the House in support of the resolution, and continued to occupy the floor until the hour arrived for the orders of the day. He has the floor, of course, for to-morrow morning.

The Deposit Question being the stated order at one o'clock,

Mr Huntington, of Connecticut, commenced a speech in support of Mr McDuffie's resolution for the restoration of the deposits, which he continued till 3, when he gave way for a motion to adjourn. And the House adjourned.

Friday, Jan. 24.—The report of the Committee on Finance on the subject of a conference of the two Houses of Congress, on their disagreement upon the amendment upon the appropriation bill, being before the Senate, Mr Webster moved to reduce the number of managers on the part of the Senate, from 4 to 3, which was agreed to, when Mr Webster, Mr Poindexter, and Mr Porter, were chosen. Mr Webster submitted to the Senate the proceedings of a meeting of citizens in New Bedford, Mass. in relation to the present all absorbing topic, the derangement of the currency of the country—which, after some remarks by him, was, on his motion, referred to the committee on Finance.

The Vice President having announced the special order to be the consideration of the Secretary's report on the removal of the deposits, and Mr Clay's resolutions thereon, Mr Preston resumed and concluded his speech, when Mr Forsyth made a few remarks in defence of the administration, in reply to Mr P. Mr Webster then moved that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Executive business, which was agreed to, and after some time spent therein, the Senate adjourned.

Mr Poindexter moved that the Senate adjourn over to Monday—but withdrew his motion at the suggestion of Mr Webster, who wished to postpone the special order of to-day till Monday, and meet to-morrow for the purpose of considering and deciding on the other resolution, submitted by the gentleman from Kentucky, (relative to extending the time of payment upon revenue bonds.)

In the House, the only business of importance was a debate upon Mr Chilton's resolutions, to appoint a select committee to inquire into the expediency of so extending the general pension law, as to embrace within its provisions those persons who were engaged in the Indian wars, down to the year 1794, and the amendment of it by Mr Bouldin, to appoint a committee to inquire into the moral effects of the pension system upon the community, and how far it ought to be abolished or repealed, which was cut short by the expiration of the hour allotted for morning business. The House adjourned over to Monday.

We received our papers by the Southern mail, on Monday, 23d inst. They brought no news, except the proceedings of Congress, on Friday, which will be found above.

The Tremont was packed full, from pit to gallery, last evening, at Johnson's benefit.—The Kembles appear to-morrow evening.

Baron Trenck was well received at the Warren, last evening. It is quite an original, bustling little piece, and considering that it was a first representation, was performed with unusual spirit. The splendid dance at the close of the first act, though correctly executed, in the main, will admit of improvement upon its repetition. The ubiquitous Baron (Mr Hill) will escape again this evening, in company with the Irish Tutor (Mr Dickson.)

Great Rise in the Ohio River.—The Cincinnati Advertiser of the 15th inst. mentions that the ice had disappeared from the river, and was succeeded by great quantities of drift wood. On the evening previous, it was 43 feet above low water mark, and still rising rapidly.

An Advocate, of Connor, having bequeathed to the Lunatic Asylum of that town a sum of 100,000 francs, concluded his legacy in the following terms:—"I gained this money from those who passed their lives in litigation, and therefore it is but an act of restitution."

Honck's Panacea, an article advertised for the cure of almost every disease, has been analyzed at Washington, when the principal ingredients were discovered to be rye whiskey, sugar, and oil of lemon.

A proposition is now before the House of Delegates of Maryland, to tax all colored persons who shall hereafter enter the State; the proceeds of the taxation to be appropriated to the use of the State Colonization Society.

The Legislature of Indiana are discussing the expediency of chartering a State Bank, with a capital of 1,600,000 dollars, and ten branches.

The editor of the Boston Courier nominates Commodore Porter as a successor to General Jackson. We caution the Courier—it has made one mistake by joking.—U. S. Gaz.

General Joy pervades Norfolk, says the Beacon, in consequence of the passage of the Railroad Bill in the Senate of Virginia. A general illumination was to take place.

The first Whale Ship from Portland, the Science, Capt Whippley, went to sea this forenoon with a fine breeze and a fair prospect.—Portland Cour.

Suicide.—On Wednesday evening last, Miss Eliza Whitehouse, of this town, put an end to her life, by hanging herself.—Augusta Age.

Colonization.—While the English are abolishing slavery in the West Indies, they are encouraging it in Brazil.

The gross receipts of Mr Wall's benefit, (the blind Harper) on Wednesday evening, at Philadelphia, were $1054 75.

The jury, in the case of Silas E. Burrows charged with seduction, have returned a verdict in his favor.

For Sore Throat.—Put a half pound of figs into a quart of water, and boil it to a pint—then open and strain the figs. Add two table spoonfuls of yeast, and the same quantity of honey. Gargle the throat with this liquid and a cure is certain.

MASSACHUSETTS LEGISLATURE.

Monday, Jan. 27.—In the Senate, several petitions were presented—one from A. Richardson and others, to be incorporated for Banking purposes in Boston, and one from Abel Bowen and others, for incorporating the Boston Society of Artists.

Bill to incorporate the Man. Mut. Fire Ins. Co. was committed. Bill to incorporate the Duxbury F. and M. Ins. Co. came up concurred with amendments—adopted—also Bill on Boston Pilotage.

In the House, the Committee on Education was instructed to inquire into the expediency of providing more effectually for the organization of meetings and for the pay of School Committees. An order was passed directing the Committee on the Judiciary to inquire into the expediency of giving a lien on Mill Dams and Mills, to such persons as sustain damage by flowing, &c. Bill in relation to Extra Judicial oaths was taken up and discussed, but without any decision thereupon the House adjourned.

BOSTON ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

The Concert of the pupils of this institution under the direction of L. Mason and G. J. Webb, Professors of the Academy, which was given on Wednesday evening last, will be repeated on WEDNESDAY AFTER-NOON, 29th inst.
